

A Year of Cross Stitch
“January”

*Join us for this brand new design series... cross stitch, that won't leave you cross-eyed!
Make an heirloom in an hour—frame it as a cheery monthly picture, make a mug rug that you won't worry about spilling on, or save it to combine all twelve months into a cross stitch masterpiece that looks like it took a lifetime to make! New for 2019.*

Set includes designs in 5" x 7" or 6" x 8" sizes.

Supplies:

- Background fabric big enough to be hooped. Use any type of fabric in any color as you would for machine embroidery. Solids are recommended to best show detail. If you are considering joining all 12 months at the end of the year, using the same background for each is recommended. Aida cloth does not make a good choice, as it is unlikely the holes will match up with the stitching—you might try a very high count linen for a handmade, traditional look. We used 100% cotton.
- Cutaway stabilizer; two pieces per hooping

For the mug rug shown:

- Batting and backing fabric 7" x 9" or 8" x 10" for the larger size
- 2-1/4" wide binding strips to wrap the perimeter of your piece

Embroidery

Hoop two pieces of cut away stabilizer along with your background fabric and load the design in the size of your choice to the embroidery machine. Print out the color chart located on the last pages of these instructions for reference; it is the same for both sizes.

Run the color changes—it's sew easy. Trim up jump stitches as you go—by its nature, cross stitch has more jumps than normal machine embroidery. If your machine doesn't auto trim, just trim out the larger jumps; most of the smaller ones will be covered over later anyway.

When the design is complete, remove it from the hoop.

Mug Rug Instructions

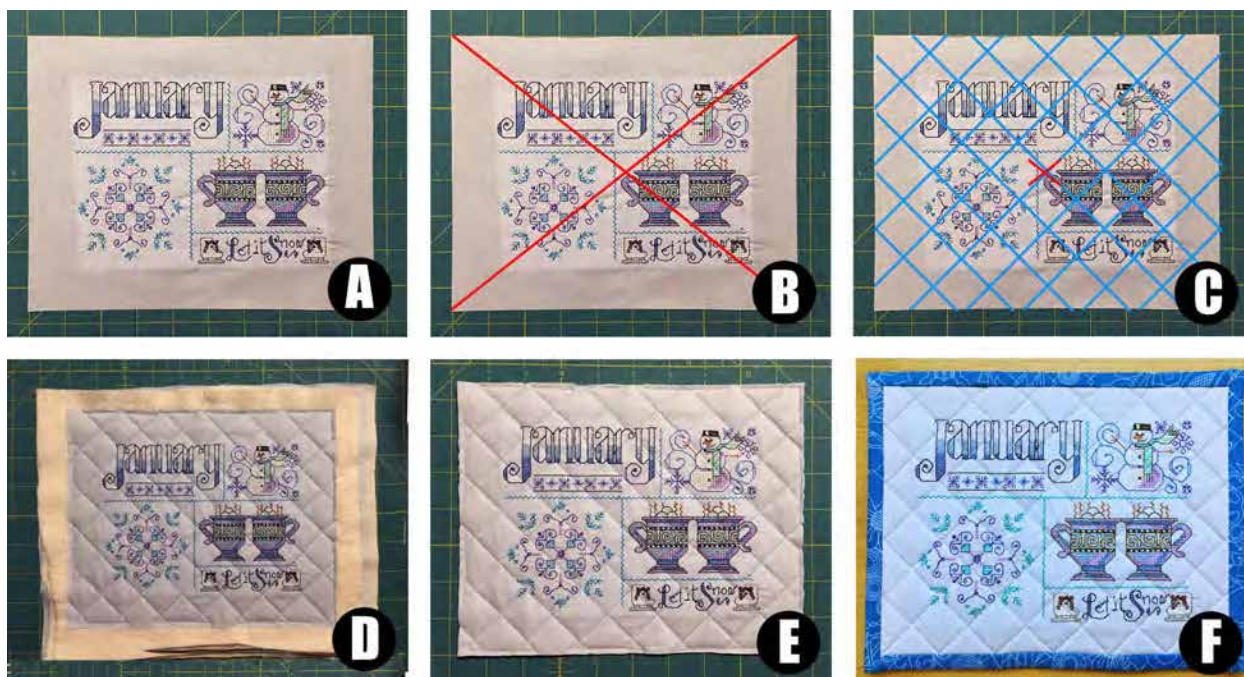

For the mug rug shown, trim your beautiful cross stitch 1-1/4" away from the outermost stitching on all sides. (Photo A.) Then trim out excess stabilizer from the back to a neat rectangle, 1/8" away from the outermost stitching. Use a ruler and mat for best results, making sure the corners are all 90-degree angles.

Now find the center of your piece and mark a dot in a wash away fabric marker. You can easily find the center by holding a ruler across the corners, shown by red lines in Photo B. Don't draw the lines in—just mark the center, or the lines may be confusing later.

With the washable fabric marker, now draw lines in 1" away from each other. Start in the middle, with lines going through the middle dot. A clear plastic gridded ruler is helpful. If you are a confident quilter used to quilting grids, you may not have to draw every single line—we did. (Photo C.)

Add your batting and backing to make a quilt sandwich. We used two layers of cotton batting for more loft. Insul-bright would be great for a hot pad. Pin around the edges, or spray baste to hold the layer together. Then quilt the lines with your machine, removing pins as you go. (Photo D.)

Trim all layers even, making sure the corners are still square. (Photo E.)

For binding, use the quilters method—these instructions are not meant to be a binding tutorial and there are many resources online to help. We picked a trendy blue print. Measure the perimeter of your piece and add 6.” Cut the strips 2-1/4” by that measurement. Attach binding by machine Hand stitch the back—finished!

More ideas

These blocks can be so much more than a mug rug! They are sew easy to make, we are going to make the mug rug plus a set for a larger, end of the year piece. Read through our suggestions below, or think of your won—be sure to post on social media to share what you come up with!

- Instead of making a mug rug, just trim your piece to fit a frame. You can change the piece out each month and save them to sew together for a large sampler at the end of the year.
- Use the piece as the center of a table runner or wall hanging. Add quilt blocks that look like snowflakes, snowballs, or just add novelty winter fabrics as sashings.
- Instead of using your mug rug, add a hanging ribbon to the top for a sweet little wall hanging.
